

About the Authors

Ivan F. Beutler, New Adolescent Money Attitude Scales: Entitlement and Conscientiousness, is a Professor in the School of Family Life at Brigham Young University where he teaches an upper division Advanced Family Finance course and a cap-stone course on Principles of Economy in Family Life. His current research focus seeks to better understand the financial and economic socialization of youth through the money attitudes of adolescents and emerging adults and the financial policies of families.

Chris Browning, Rational Choice with Complex Products: Consumer Valuation of Annuities, is an Assistant Professor, the Chickasaw Nation Endowed Professor, and the Chair of the Accounting Department at East Central University. He is also a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Personal Financial Planning at Texas Tech University. His research interests include retirement planning and the impacts of cognitive ability and financial literacy on financial decision making.

Swarn Chatterjee, Outstanding AFCPE® Conference Paper: Debt Burden of Young Adults in the United States, is an Assistant Professor of Family Financial Planning in the Department of Housing and Consumer Economics at the University of Georgia. He received his Ph.D. from Texas Tech University. His research interests include studying personal financial decision making of households across different stages of their life cycle and personal financial decisions of immigrants as they integrate into the American society.

Michael Finke, Rational Choice with Complex Products: Consumer Valuation of Annuities, is a Professor and Ph.D. coordinator in the Department of Personal Financial Planning at Texas Tech University. He serves as the editor of the Journal of Personal Finance and is a contributing editor to Research Magazine. He received his Ph.D. in Family Resource Management from the Ohio State University and in Finance from the University of Missouri.

Clinton G. Gudmunson, New Adolescent Money Attitude Scales: Entitlement and Conscientiousness, is an Assistant Professor in Human Development and Family Studies at Iowa State University. His research investigates financial socialization from a life course perspective, with a special focus on understanding economic pressure in family lives. He has also recently initiated grant-funded research on financial counseling at ISU's Financial Counseling Clinic (see: www.hdfs.hs.iastate.edu/financial/). He earned his Ph.D. in Family Social Science from the University of Minnesota in 2010.

Sandra Huston, Rational Choice with Complex Products: Consumer Valuation of Annuities, is an Associate Professor in the Department of Personal Financial Planning at Texas Tech University. She received her Ph.D. in Consumer Economics from the University of Missouri-Columbia. Her research interests involve analysis of human capital related to personal finance including financial literacy, the impact of using financial advice in household decision making, and the impact of financial sophistication on resource allocation within household portfolios.

Russell N. James III, Choosing and Changing Financial Advisors: An fMRI Study of Associated Brain Activations, is an Associate Professor and the CH Foundation Chair in Personal Financial Planning in the Department of Personal Financial Planning at Texas Tech University. He directs the graduate program in Charitable Financial Planning, including the online Graduate Certificate in Charitable Financial Planning (details at www.EncourageGenerosity.com). His research focuses on uncovering practical and neurocognitive methods to encourage generosity and satisfaction in financial decision making. He received his B.A. in economics and his Ph.D. in consumer and family economics from the University of Missouri, and his J.D. from the University of Missouri School of Law. He is a Certified Financial Planner® and a member of the Missouri Bar.

Jinhee Kim, Outstanding AFCPE® 2012 Conference Paper: Debt Burden of Young Adults in the United States, is an Associate Professor and Extension Specialist in the Department of Family Science at the University of Maryland, College Park. She received her Ph.D. from Virginia Tech University and M.S. and B.S. from Seoul National University in Korea. Her research interests are financial management of immigrants, financial socialization, and intergenerational transfers in the U.S. and other countries. She also is interested in health behaviors and financial strains/financial well-being.

Jung Eun Kim, Outstanding AFCPE® Conference Paper: Debt Burden of Young Adults in the United States, is a visiting researcher at the University of Maryland, College Park, and a senior researcher at the Korean Institute for Consumer Education. She has previously worked as a postdoctoral fellow at the Research Institute of Human Ecology at Seoul National University, South Korea where she obtained both her undergraduate and graduate degrees. Dr. Kim's current research interests include digitalization and privacy issues, consumer information, and research methodology.

Barbara O'Neill, Book Review: Bonds: The Unbeaten Path to Secure Investment Growth, holds the rank of Professor II in the School of Environmental and Biological Sciences at Rutgers University and is Rutgers Cooperative Extension's Specialist in Financial Resource Management. Previously, she was a Family and Consumer Sciences Educator in Sussex County, NJ and taught over 1,100 classes to over 24,000 adult learners. She also provides national leadership for the Cooperative Extension program Small Steps to Health and Wealth™. Dr. O'Neill has written over 1,500 consumer newspaper articles and over 150 articles for academic journals, conference proceedings, and other professional journal publications. She is a certified financial planner (CFP®), chartered retirement planning counselor (CRPC®), accredited financial counselor (AFC), certified housing counselor (CHC), certified financial educator (CFEd), and certified in family and consumer sciences (CFCS). Dr. O'Neill served as president of the Association for Financial Counseling and Planning Education (AFCPE) in 2003 and is the author of two trade books, Saving on a Shoestring, and Investing on a Shoestring, and co-author of Investing For Your Future, Money Talk: A Financial Guide for Women, and Small Steps to Health and Wealth. Dr. O'Neill received her Ph.D. in family financial management from Virginia Tech and holds a Master's degree in consumer economics from Cornell University and a B.S. in home economics education from the State University of New York and Oneonta. She has received over three dozen awards for program excellence and over $835,000 in funding to support her financial education programs and research.

Carl W. Roberts, The Influence of a Financial Management Course on Couples' Relationship Quality, is Emeritus Professor of Statistics and Sociology at Iowa State University. His primary research focus is on world cultures and is motivated by an interest in how language shapes perception and behavior. He has written extensively on linguistic structure in articles appearing in Social Forces and Sociological Methodology, as well as in both a recent monograph, 'The' Fifth Modality: On Languages that Shape Our Motivations and Cultures (2008), and his edited collection, Text Analysis for the Social Sciences (1997). His substantive work investigates cultural variations in social discourse based on sampled texts ranging from medieval documents to editorials in contemporary foreign and domestic newspapers.

Paul Westbrook, CFP®, Book Review: What Investors Really Want, teaches Finance I and II at Rutgers University. Paul is also head of Westbrook Financial Advisers, a fee-only financial and retirement planning firm providing individual financial and retirement planning services. He has a Master's degree from George Washington University and received his CFP® designation in 1984. In 1992, Paul was appointed to a financial planning task force to create standards for financial planners. Paul has spoken at financial planning and benefit conferences and is quoted in such magazines as Money Magazine, Fortune, The Wall Street Journal, and Barron's. He has written several books; his latest is Teaching Money Applications to Make Mathematics Meaningful, Grades 7-12 by Corwin Press.

Kevin J. Zimmerman, The Influence of a Financial Management Course on Couples' Relationship Quality; Book Review: The Power of Habit: Why We Do What We Do In Life and Business, is a doctoral candidate of Human Development and Family Studies at Iowa State University, where he also received his M.S. in Couple and Family Therapy. His research centers on relationship quality and commitment, particularly after one of the partners undergoes a change of identity, such as sexual orientation or religious affiliation, after the establishment of the relationship.