

About the Authors

NaRita G. Anderson, Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, began teaching at the University of Central Oklahoma in 2006. She is a graduate student at Kansas State University pursuing a Ph.D. in Personal Financial Planning.

Kristy Archuleta, College Students and Financial Distress: Exploring Debt, Financial Satisfaction, and Financial Anxiety; Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, is an Associate Professor in the Personal Financial Planning program in the School of Family Studies and Human Services at Kansas State University and a Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist in the state of Kansas. She is a co-founder of the Financial Therapy Association and the Journal of Financial Therapy, in which she is the current editor. Dr. Archuleta teaches courses in the undergraduate and doctoral degree programs including introduction to personal and family finance, research methods, and financial counseling. Her research interests include dyadic processes influencing marital and financial satisfaction empirical based treatment models for financial issues, and rural and farm families.

Amanda Barnett, Spousal Decision Making and Long-Term Care Insurance, is an Assistant Professor in Human Development and Family Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Stout. She holds a Ph.D. in Family Social Science from the University of Minnesota. Dr. Barnett's research focuses on family gerontology, specifically family caregiving, decision-making in later life families, gendered issues with aging, and research methods and statistics.

Kathryn Brewton, Learning Context When Studying Financial Planning in High Schools: Nesting of Student, Teacher, and Classroom Characteristics, is a doctoral graduate student in the Department of Family Social Science at the University of Minnesota. Her B.S. is in psychology from Kansas State and her M.A. is from the University of Minnesota. Her primary research interests lie at the intersection of family relationships and finances.

Sonya Britt, Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, is an Assistant Professor and Program Director of Personal Financial Planning at Kansas State University and also holds the CFP® and AFC® credentials. She teaches courses in the undergraduate, master's, and doctoral degree programs. As founding president of the Financial Therapy Association—an international association of practitioners and academicians—Britt enjoys the opportunity to combine her skills in marriage and family therapy (M.S.) with her talents in financial planning (Ph.D.). Britt currently serves as a board member to the American Council on Consumer Interests association. She is also an associate editor for the Journal of Family and Economic Issues and on the editorial board of the Journal of Financial Therapy. Britt recently published an edited book with Dr. Dottie Durband, Student Financial Literacy: Campus-Based Program Development, which leads readers through the process of developing or enhancing financial literacy programs for college students.

Swarn Chatterjee, The Impact of Immigrant Status and Racial/Ethnic Group on Differences in Responses to a Risk Aversion Measure, is an Associate Professor of Family Financial Planning at the University of Georgia. His research interests include studying the financial planning behavior of households across different stages of their life cycle and the personal financial decisions of immigrants as they integrate into their host society. He has published in Financial Services Review, Family and Consumer Sciences Research Journal, the International Journal of Consumer Studies, the Journal of Family and Economic Issues, the Journal of Real Estate Research, and Urban Studies. He received his Ph.D. in Consumer Economics from Texas Tech University.

Anita K. Dale, College Students and Financial Distress: Exploring Debt, Financial Satisfaction, and Financial Anxiety; Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, is a Ph.D. Candidate in Personal Financial Planning at Kansas State University. Her research interests include families and the influences that enhance and inhibit their financial goal achievement. She is also a graduate assistant, working with the PFP Certificate Program.

Sharon M. Danes, Learning Context When Studying Financial Planning in High Schools: Nesting of Student, Teacher, and Classroom Characteristics, is a Professor in the Family Social Science Department at the University of Minnesota. She has authored over 160 refereed research articles, book chapters, and outreach publications emphasizing the intersection of economic and social decision-making. Her Ph.D. is in family economics from Iowa State University. She has received over $1,050,000 of research and educational grants in recent years; the most recent grant from NSF. She is Past-President of the Association for Financial Counseling and Planning Education. She serves on several editorial boards of research journals.

Mei-Chi Fang, The Impact of Immigrant Status and Racial/Ethnic Group on Differences in Responses to a Risk Aversion Measure, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Business Administration at The Transworld University in Taiwan. Her research interests include studying the financial decision making of the elderly, determinants of obesity, and risk tolerance and sensation seeking. She received her B.S. in Economics from The National Taipei University in Taiwan and a Ph.D. in Consumer Sciences from The Ohio State University.

Deborah M. Figart, Book Review, Wall Street Women, is Professor of Education and Economics at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, and Director of the Stockton Center for Economic and Financial Literacy. She is one of the founders of the International Association for Feminist Economics (IAFFE). She has written on the subjects of pay equity and wage discrimination, labor-management relations, working time, emotional labor at work, minimum and living wage issues, job evaluation, and career ladders. She is co-author of Living Wages, Equal Wages, Gender and Labor Market Policies in the United States (Routledge, 2002). Some of her new research is on financial exclusion in the U.S. and the student loan debt crisis.

John E. Grable, Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, holds an Athletic Association Endowed Professorship at the University of Georgia and the CFP® credential. Dr. Grable served as the founding editor for the Journal of Personal Finance and the founding co-editor of the Journal of Financial Therapy. His research interests include financial risk-tolerance assessment, financial planning help-seeking behavior, and psychophysiological economics.

Sherman D. Hanna, The Impact of Immigrant Status and Racial/Ethnic Group on Differences in Responses to a Risk Aversion Measure, is a Professor in the Department of Human Sciences at The Ohio State University. He is the Program Director for the undergraduate financial planning program registered with the CFP® Board. He has done research on racial/ethnic patterns in investment and credit decisions, funded by a grant from the FINRA Research Foundation. He received a B.S. in economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a Ph.D. in consumer economics from Cornell University.

Justin Henegar, Credit Card Behavior as a Function of Impulsivity and Mother's Socialization Factors, holds an MBA from Oklahoma Christian University in Leadership and Organizational Development. He is currently a Ph.D. candidate in the Personal Financial Planning program at Kansas State University. In addition to his academic degrees, Justin also holds both the Certified Financial Planner designation and the Chartered Retirement Planning Counselor designation. Justin has earned the Qualified Kingdom Advisor designation from Kingdom Advisors. Justin has presented multiple posters at professional conferences and has co-edited several peer-reviewed academic articles which were published in the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning and the Journal of Personal Finance. Professionally, Justin works as a Client Relationship Manager for Merrill Lynch/Bank of America in the San Antonio area. He is part of a management team that oversees more than 170 financial advisors and over 100 client associates, covering 9 offices in Texas.

Rebecca Kelley, Increasing Influence of the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning: Documentation of Indexing in Prominent Databases, is the Business Librarian at Louisiana State University. Her research interests include information literacy in undergraduate business students. She received her Master of Library and Information Science from Louisiana State University.

Frances C. Lawrence, Increasing Influence of the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning: Documentation of Indexing in Prominent Databases, holds the George Cire and Lena Grand Williams Alumni Professorship at Louisiana State University and is the Associate Dean of the E. J. Ourso College of Business. She received her B.S. from Virginia Tech and M.S. and Ph.D. from Florida State University. Her research focuses on issues related to financial management, poverty, and health care. She is the Director of LSU's CFP Board-Registered Program and teaches courses related to financial planning. Dr. Lawrence has received numerous awards including the LSU Alumni Association Distinguished Faculty Award. From 2006-2013, she served as Editor of the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning.

Barbara O'Neill, Book Review: Pound Foolish, is Rutgers Cooperative Extension's Specialist in Financial Resource Management. Previously a county Extension educator, she has written over 1,500 newspaper columns and over 120 articles for professional publications and served as 2003 President of the Association for Financial Counseling and Planning Education. A certified financial planner (CFP®), chartered retirement planning counselor (CRPC®), accredited financial counselor (AFC), certified housing counselor (CHC), certified financial educator (CFEd) and Certified Personal and Family Finance Educator (CPFEE), Dr. O'Neill is the author of Saving on a Shoestring and Investing on a Shoestring and co-author of Money Talk: a Financial Guide for Women and Small Steps to Health and Wealth™. She has received over three dozen awards and over $850,000 in grants for financial education programs and research.

Hannah Plauche, Increasing Influence of the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning: Documentation of Indexing in Prominent Databases, is a Ph.D. candidate at Louisiana State University in Family and Child Studies. She received a B.S. in Family, Child, and Consumer Sciences and an M.S. in Vocational Education from Louisiana State University. She is also the graduate assistant to the Editor of the Journal of Financial Counseling and Planning. Her research interests include marital stability and reconciliation and the financial impact on marital stability.

Michael C. Rodriguez, Learning Context When Studying Financial Planning in High Schools: Nesting of Student, Teacher, and Classroom Characteristics, is an Associate Professor of quantitative methods in education in the Department of Educational Psychology. He also holds the Campbell Leadership Chair in Education and Human Development. He received his Ph.D. in Measurement and Quantitative Methods from Michigan State University. His areas of research include test item development, item response models, multilevel modeling, and cross-cultural measurement.

Scott M. Spann, College Students and Financial Distress: Exploring Debt, Financial Satisfaction, and Financial Anxiety, is a Ph.D. candidate in Personal Financial Planning at Kansas State University. He holds the Certified Financial Planner™ designation and provides workplace financial wellness services in his role as a Resident Financial Planner for Financial Finesse. Spann's research interests include financial wellness, retirement preparedness, and psychosocial influences on financial behaviors. He received a B.S. in psychology from the College of Charleston and a M.A. in clinical counseling from The Citadel.

Marlene Stum, Spousal Decision Making and Long-Term Care Insurance, is a Professor in Family Social Science at the University of Minnesota. She holds a Ph.D. in Adult Education and Gerontology from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Dr. Stum's extension teaching and research focuses on financial security in later life, including decision-making processes and outcomes related to families and inheritance, financing long-term care, and health care directives. She has served on federal DHHS and State of Minnesota DHS technical panels addressing financing long-term care options and policies.

Rebecca J. Travnichek, Book Review: Student Financial Literacy: Campus-Based Program Development, holds the highest non-tenured track rank of Extension Professional and is a Regional Family Financial Education Specialist with University of Missouri Extension. She earned a Ph.D. from Auburn University in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology with an emphasis in Family Economics. In addition, she holds an M.S. in Housing, Interior Design and Consumer Studies from Oklahoma State University and a B.S. from Emporia State University. Dr. Travnichek is an Accredited Financial Counselor through the Association of Financial Counseling and Planning Education, and is currently serving as the national Co-President of AFCPE. She is also leading the development of youth financial capacity within eXtension. Her educational and counseling interests include improving consumer knowledge regarding identity theft, fraud, and scams; personal financial management among incarcerated men and women; education and counseling during free income tax preparation appointments; and financial skill development in youth.