FUTURE FINANCIAL PLANNING FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES: A NATIONAL STUDY ON WHAT'S WORKING AND WHAT'S NOT

Thursday, October 13, 2022
12 PM EST

For many people with disabilities and their families, future financial planning is overwhelming and unnecessarily challenging. They sometimes struggle to navigate complex and varied systems to find professionals who have the knowledge and experience needed to help them secure their finances, benefits, and futures. During this session, we will share the results of a national study of more than 4,000 people with disabilities, their families, and professionals in related fields. We will present what we learned about people's experiences and some challenges related to future financial planning, as well as solutions that help meet planning efforts.

PRACTICAL WAYS TO DECREASE YOUR CLIENTS' MONEY ANXIETY

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 2022
12:00 PM ET

People experience money anxiety and stress, even when their finances are objectively doing well. In this webinar, Spencer Sherman will explain how to bring the emotional intelligence of mindfulness to money to reduce financial stress. This program will offer practical techniques to help train clients to become less reactive to the ups and downs of the markets, their careers, and their personal lives. The goal is for clients to realize that their money stress is more within their control than they think and, in the process, achieve real financial freedom.

PLANNING CONSIDERATIONS FOR UNMARRIED COUPLES

MONDAY, JULY 18, 2022
12:00 PM ET

As grey divorce is on the rise, there is a similar trend that divorce is falling among the younger demographics as per US census data. When one looks to the numbers, we see that many more couples are intentionally cohabitating, and this may be for a plethora of reasons.

This webinar is for new and experienced financial counselors open to a better understanding of the emotional and financial needs of a growing demographic of unmarried young and late life couples (after divorce) and expanding their conversations in a supportive and compassionate way while providing strategies to help mitigate their health and financial challenges.

FINANCIAL INFIDELITY

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 2022
12:00 PM ET

Financial infidelity can happen when couples combine their finances and then lie to each other about their spending. This type of infidelity can have devastating and severe consequences on relationships, such as couples, parents/children, friends, or roommates. During this webinar, we will discuss what financial infidelity is, how to recognize it, ways to overcome it, and steps to take to avoid it.
